The air quality on cruise ships is so bad, it could harm your health, undercover report says \(January, 2019\)

“On the decks of the four Carnival Corp. cruise ships studied over a two-year period, concentrations of particulate matter measured were “comparable to concentrations measured in polluted cities, including Beijing and Santiago,” according to Ryan Kennedy, author of the report and an assistant professor at Johns Hopkins University Bloomberg School of Public Health.”

“We know heavy fuel oil has harmful constituents in it,” said Ulrich of Stand.earth. “We know that there are higher rates of asthma among children in port communities.”

And, from the report:

“The PM emitted from ship engines burning diesel fuel or heavy fuel oil is primarily composed of particles spanning from a few nanometers to less than one micron (0.001 μm –1.0 μm).”

“Studies have demonstrated UFPs have detrimental effects to the cardiovascular and respiratory systems, including a higher incidence of atherosclerosis and increased disease severity of asthma. Even short-term exposure to UFPs from traffic exhaust is associated with adverse cardiovascular outcomes”

Two of the four ships included in the study regularly visit Victoria:

- Amsterdam (11/18/11/0)
- Emerald Princess (18/20/1/19)
